

“LEADERSHIP WOMAN PRACTICE CHARTA”

« Whatever is progress for women is progress for all ». This is what the international ruling classes said when they gathered for the UN summit meeting in 2005. Various studies are published, particularly by the UN, which clearly point out that the development of our societies is eminently related to the implication of women in social, cultural and economic life. In our masculine shaped world, women participate according to this historic mould whereas nowadays everybody knows very well that women and men are not alike. Each woman, becoming aware of her proper values will develop an authentic and so far underestimated potential. By setting free her strong individual and collective creation dynamic she will contribute essentially to the development of our societies.

The “Leadership Woman Practice” Charta is meant to be a guideline for this “feminine awareness”.

Clause 1: Individual values and resources of women and men are different. They do not depend in any way on cultural and/or religious considerations. It is necessary to valorise each specificity and to recognize their complementarities for a constructive development of the future.

Clause 2: Men and women are identically concerned by all the challenges humanity is presently facing. Therefore it is just and necessary that women participate actively in decision taking.

Clause 3: The woman must take upon herself power of action and her complete participation on an equal footing in each sphere of social life. She must access to leading positions to guarantee the sustainable development of the environmental, social and economic life.

Clause 4: Women worldwide must decide freely of the orientation they tend to give to their lives and assume the entire responsibility.

Clause 5: For sustainable development women and men must define together a new structure of life functioning: values, distribution of the parts, career plan, maternity, paternity, culture, humanity engagement...

Clause 6: It is the responsibility of each one to encourage comprehension and evolution of the human values within all manifestations.

Clause 7: The economic actors must watch over the application of corporate social responsibility in ad equation with human needs. It is not the human to be at the service of economy but for economy to be at the service of humans.

Clause 8: Women must get aware of what they are: woman, mother, lover, spouse, chief, friend, comrade... After giving birth a woman increases considerably her performances in every aspect, she is capable of bringing up high performing defence strategies to avoid conflict, she masters a project up to the term just like she takes care of the development of her child, she's an excellent organiser, she disposes of a real specific power of creation.

Clause 9: It is indispensable to recognize the potential of “the feminine” in our societies: feminine intuition, feminine sensibility, feminine creation, feminine management, feminine staying power,...values of which men are concerned as well.

Clause 10: The acceptance of diversity of human equilibrium and human harmony must become the priority for women and men in this century.

By my signature I agree :